A photograph showing two workers in high-visibility yellow vests and dark clothing standing on a concrete pad. They are positioned next to a metal structure that includes a set of stairs leading up to a platform. The structure appears to be part of a larger facility, possibly a water treatment plant or a utility site. The background shows some trees and a clear sky.

Vue du site

A close-up photograph of a metal staircase. The steps are made of metal and show significant rust and corrosion, particularly along the edges and in the grooves. The supporting structure, including the stringer and the base plate, is also heavily corroded. A vertical metal plate with some markings is visible on the left side of the staircase. The ground in the foreground is a rough, grey concrete surface.
